5 Itchiku Kubota Art Museum

2255 Kawaguchi, Fujikawaguchiko, Minamitsuru District, Yamanashi 401-0304, Japan

The museum showcases the lifelong work of artist Itchiku Kubota (1917-2003), who revived the lost Muromachi-era tsujigahana dyeing technique for kimonos. Over 100 vibrant, nature-inspired silk garments form the "Symphony" series, displayed in a striking pyramid-like main hall of ancient cypress beams and a Gaudí-inspired coral stone wing.

6 Lake Yamanakako

Yamanakako, Yamanashi, Japan

The lake is the largest and highest-elevation lake among the Fuji Five Lakes, lies closest to Mount Fuji at 980 metres above sea level. Formed by ancient lava flows, its shallow waters support boating, fishing, windsurfing, camping, and paragliding. Stunning Fuji reflections grace its shores, especially during "Diamond Fuji" sunrises.

7 Saruhashi Bridge

Saruhashimachi, Otsuki, Yamanashi 409-0614, Japan

It is a historic arch bridge spanning the Katsura River gorge in Ōtsuki City. Designated a Place of Scenic Beauty, it exemplifies the rare hanebashi cantilever design with beams anchored into cliff faces, eliminating central supports. Dating to the Edo Period as part of the Kōshū Kaidō highway, its elegant structure inspired ukiyo-e prints by Hiroshige and Hokusai. Legends claim monkeys bridged the chasm, earning its "monkey bridge" name.

8 Chureito Pagoda

2-chome-4-1 Asama, Fujiyoshida, Yamanashi 403-0011, Japan

The pagoda is a striking five-story vermilion structure in Fujiyoshida City and serves as a peace memorial built in 1963 within Arakurayama Sengen Shrine grounds. Perched 400 steps up Mount Arakura, it honours fallen soldiers from World War II and earlier conflicts. Its Edo-period-inspired architecture frames breathtaking views of snow-capped Mount Fuji, especially amid 800 cherry blossoms in spring or autumn foliage.
